In San Candido, a small village set in the wonderful mountains of Alto Adige, the Forestry Police have a new commander, Francesco. Francesco is a former member of the Army Special Forces. One year ago, while playing with his father's gun, his very own son died. The tragic event led to the breakup of his marriage to Livia and now Francesco has decided to embark on a new life. But escaping his past proves difficult. While he investigates together with Vincenzo, chief of the local Police, the disappearance of a young woman, Eleonora Sartori, Francesco makes his way to a community of people living in the woods around the village. Inside the community led by Albert Kroess, an enigmatic spiritual leader, Francesco finds his wife Livia, living there to find the strength to overcome the death of her son. Meanwhile, Emma, a young ethologist, also arrives in San Candido. An illness has given her reason to make changes in her life and she has decided to move to Alto Adige to study wolves up close. Due to a series of coincidences, Emma and Francesco find themselves working together. Getting to know Emma makes Francesco understand that he has many reasons to live his life fully again, despite all that has happened.
